Special Guest Editorial
by a moron from the internet

....Fuck You.
I see where your going with your 'commentary' so I'll take the subject matter alittle darker. By now we've all seen the Dark Knight; would you take the time spouting mindless fodder about Heath Ledgers spiritualy unsettling performance? I mean the man was brilliant. That is the power of the arts; it can consume you. Isn't our life's work, our dreams, our aspirations, what we strive to leave as legacy? I mean, a great deal of people on those list are dead. I mean it's like saying your life's work amounted nothing more than a very poorly written satirical blog. I see the Pope on your pic. Would you enjoy my opinionated blog about why he's a piece of shit? No, didn't think so. Just because we've the power to offend, deosn't mean we ought to. He means a lot to millions...an so do those albums.
Saying that someone's ground breaking revoultionary work is crap, just to look cool is really saying a lot more about yourself then you let on.(not YOU personally sordid) Yea, people can write a what they want. I can do the same, I just refrain from doing so out of respect. I can do alot; doesn't mean I should for free speech's sake. I mean what if this were ablog about JFK? People would want her head! I personally think these albums can do more than any politician has.And yea, it is opinion, but a calculated one. An uncalculated opinion is something akin to this blog,or your response to mine for that matter. Have a good one.

P.S. I see why your defending this poor excuse for satirical literature; by the looks of your page, you seem to be trying to earn a living of off 'satire'. What a poor excuse for a human being you are.(If I am correct in that assement)